

Costa Rico

Sunday, 15 July 2007

To avoid midday cloud built up and the afternoon tropical storm, we departed Mexico at 7 am for a three and half hours of flight to

Liberia , Costa Rico. It is beautiful in Costa Rico, as well as rainy weather for the most of the afternoon.

Since we are running one day late, we will fly to Venezuela tomorrow and then direct to

Miami on the 17. We will depart Miami on the 18th, and should be home at Greenville, South Carolina by 2 pm on July 18th. I am looking forward to see my family and anxious to get home. We now flow 32,136 miles around the earth and only have 2,526 to go.
